

Communicative grammar practice: Conditional clauses

The Desert Island Game

Which of the objects is the most important one to take to a desert island?

➔ Please use as many if-clauses as possible ➔

| Conditional Type I= reale, erfüllbare BedingungBedingung if + PRESENT , Folge will + Infinitiv | Conditional Type II= wahrscheinlich nicht zu erfüllende BedingungBedingung if + PAST , Folge would + Infinitiv |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| If it rains on the desert island, we will need an umbrella.                                            | If I went to a desert island, I would take my favourite T-shirt.                                                       |
| If we take a box of matches to the desert island, we will be able to make a fire.                      | If I had to go to a desert island, I wouldn't need lipstick.                                                           |
| If we are hungry, an MP3-player won't help us.                                                         | If we didn't find anything to eat, we would die .                                                                      |
| If I don't take my mobile phone, I won't be able to call for help.                                     | If there was water on the island, we would have something to drink.                                                    |
|                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                      |